ROBBED STUDIO WINDOW.

The display window of Carter's studio, at the foot of the stairs leading to the studio, was broken open last night and three costly pictures stolen. The pictures were valued at about $5 each and were printed on the very best photo material that can be bought. Mr. Carter states that the thief was evidently a man, as he took particular pains to leave the pictures of the men and babies in the window, and took only the photographs of the young ladies. This is the second or third time the window has been entered since the studio was opened, and each time several dollars worth of pictures have been stolen.

Mr. Carter offers a reward of $5 for the return of the pictures or the apprehension of the thief, and informs the Eagle that he will have the windows fixed so they can not be entered without the key unless the glass is broken.
